THE MAYORALTY CASE.

Joseph Simon, appellant, vs. the common council of the city of Portland; appeal from Multnomah county.

HEAD NOTES.

Section 22 of the charter of the city of Portland provides that "a certificate of election is primary evidence of the facts therein stated, but the council is the final judge of the qualifications and election of the mayor and of its own members, and in case of a contest between two persons claiming to be elected thereto must determine the same."

In a contest, before the common council between S. and T. for mayor the council counted the ballots cast at the election and declared the vote a tie. S. claimed that the council committed legal errors in counting the ballots, which if legally and properly counted and such alleged errors corrected would show a majority of votes cast for S. On an application for a writ of review directed to the council,

Held, That the decision of the council was final and conclusive.

OPINION BY WALDO, J.

This is an appeal from the judgment of the circuit court of Multnomah county quashing a writ of review directed to the common council of the city of Portland.

At a general election for municipal officers held in the city of Portland on the 20th day of June, 1881, the appellant and D. P. Thompson were candidates for the office of mayor. On the 23d day of June, 1881, a certificate of election was awarded to Mr. Thompson. The appellant contested the election before the common council, where the vote was declared to be a tie.

The grounds upon which the appellant relies, to reverse the decision of the council, are, that said council in counting the ballots rejected two ballots from the count which should have been counted for the appellant, and counted two ballots, called "pasters" in the argument, for Mr. Thompson which should have been rejected. The ballots which the appellant claims should have been counted for him, designated in the transcript and argument, ballot 100 and ballot 200, contained the names of both candidates. Ballot 100 contained the name of D. P. Thompson in print, the name of Jos. Simon written in pencil, in a line with and over the name of Thompson, and a pencil line drawn along, intended to erase either one or both names. Ballot 200 contained for the office of mayor the name of D. P. Thompson in print and the name of Jos. Simon written in pencil.

Errors of fact cannot be re-examined on a writ of review or certiorari, and the most that can be claimed is that the action of the council in counting the two ballots for Mr. Thompson and rejecting the ballots 100 and 200 and not counting them for Mr. Simon, was erroneous in point of law. But an obstacle to the consideration of the question presents itself at the threshold.

Section 22 of the charter of the city of Portland provides, "a certificate of election is primary evidence of the facts therein stated, but the council is the final judge of the qualifications and election of the mayor and of its own members and in case of a contest between two persons claiming to be elected thereto, must determine the same."

Upon this section counsel for respondent say in their brief, "To hold that the decision of the council is subject to review is to rescind the word final from the statute. No possible use of the word where it stands can be imagined if it was not to signify an end to the controversy to which it relates. The word final is sometimes applied to the judgment of a court to distinguish it from interlocutory judgments. When so used it is intended to signify a judgment by which all the questions in a case have been determined as contradistinguished from a judgment in the same case by which one or only a part of the questions therein have been decided. The word final in this statute is not used in any such sense. It is here applied to the court. Can any intent be imagined or imputed to the legislature other than an intent to oust the jurisdiction of the courts over an election contest as to the mayor and members of the common council of the city of Portland? They either changed the law in that respect or did not. If they did the circuit court had no jurisdiction this case; if they did not, then the word final in the statute has no meaning or effect.'"

An act of the legislature of Connecticut provides "That the board of councilmen for the city of South Norwalk shall be the final judges of the election returns, and of the validity of elections and qualifications of its own members." In Sallest vs. Common Council of South Norwalk, 40 Conn., 361, it is said of this provision, "It makes the common council of the city the final judges of the election returns and qualifications of its members. By the use of the word final the legislature intended to divest the superior court of jurisdiction in such cases and make the common council the sole tribunal to determine the legality of the election of its members."

So in People vs. Fitzgerald 41 Mich. 2, a provision in the city charter making the common council the final judges of the election of aldermen was held to exclude the jurisdiction of the court on a mandamus to reinstate one whom they had excluded without a proper hearing on the merits. So of an analogous provision in a statute of Kentucky, Ch. J. Simpson says, obiter in Bateman vs. McGowan 1 Met. 538: "The decision of the contesting board is made final and conclusive by the statute. By this provision the legislature evidently intended to accomplish a two-fold purpose. A speedy and summary mode of deciding cases of contested elections and determining finally and conclusively which one of the claimants was entitled to the office, was very important, and to effect this object the organization of this board was provided. Another object equally important was to withdraw these contests from the jurisdiction of the courts, and, as was said in the case of Newcum vs Kirtley, (13, B. Monroe 517), to prevent the ordinary tribunals of justice from being harassed and indeed overwhelmed with the investigations, and involved in the excitement to which these cases may be expected to give rise."

This object was also effected by making the decision of this board final and conclusive in all cases of contested elections. From the decision of this board there is no appeal. Its decisions are final in all questions of law or fact which may be involved in the investigation of the rights of the claimants to the office in contest." See also Coon vs. Mason county, 22 Ill., 666. Moore vs. Mayfield 47, Ill. 177. Peavey vs. Robbins 3 Jones 341; Att'y General vs Supervisors of Lake county, 33, Mich. 289; Commonwealth vs. Small 26 Pa. S. C. 31. A final judge therefore is one whose decisions are final and conclusive.

To show that notwithstanding this section of the charter the circuit court had power to review the decision of the council on certiorari, the appellant cited the following authorities: Thompson vs. Multnomah County, 2 Org., 39; Cunningham vs. Squires, 2 W. Va., 422; ex parte Heath, 3 Hill, 50; ex parte Mayor of Albany, 23 Wen., 287; Leroy vs. Meyer, etc., 20 John, 430; Lawton vs. Com. of Cambridge, 2 Caines Rep., 182; State vs. District Medical Society, 35 N. J., 200; 3 Lansing, 149; 17 Iowa, 387; 2 Kernan, 411; 9 Ark., 73, 9 Minn., 166; Smith's L. C., 984; Robertson vs. Groves, 4 Org., 210; State vs. McKinnon, 8 Org., 493; People vs. Hall, 80 N. Y., 170; Murphree vs. Leeper, Overton (Tenn.) 1; Reardon vs. Gray, 2 Hayne (N. C.), 245.

Before considering how far these authorities go to show what appellant claims for them, it may be well to look at a few earlier cases, and note the principle on which they rest.

And first, it must be remembered that "courts of limited jurisdiction must not only act within the scope of their authority, but it must appear upon the face of their proceedings that they did so; and if this does not appear, all that they do is coram non judice and void." Washington, J., Kemp vs. Kennedy, Pet. C. C., 36. In Rex. vs. Croke, Cowper, 29, where the proceedings were quashed on certiorari, Lord Mansfield said: "This is a special authority delegated by act of parliament to particular persons to take away a man's property and estate against his will; therefore it must be strictly pursued, and must appear to be so upon the face of the order.

Thus in State vs. Metzger, 26 Mo., a conviction for an assault and battery before a justice of the peace of Gasconade county was set aside because it did not appear on the face of the proceedings that the assault was committed in the county. So in Proctor vs. the State of Delaware, 5. Harr, 387, the conviction before a justice of the peace of a non-resident free negro coming into the state was quashed on certiorari because, for one reason, the record of the conviction did not show that the coming into the state was after the passage of the act, the court saying, "In a specially delegated jurisdiction and a proceeding under a penal law, the record must show everything requisite to bring the case within the jurisdiction and the offense within the law."

Now the oft cited case of Rex vs. Morely, 2, Burr 1040, arose under the conventicle act of 22, Car. 2 C. 1. Morely was a Methodist preacher and had been convicted under that act before a justice of the peace, had appealed to the quarter sessions, been tried by a jury and judgment given against him on their verdict. A certiorari having been issued out of King's Bench, counsel for the prosecution contended that after all this a writ of error might lie, but not a certiorari which will only lie when there is no other remedy. They also cited a clause in the 6th "section of the act, "that no other court whatsoever shall intermeddle with any cause or causes of appeal upon this act, but they shall be finally determined in the quarter sessions only." Counsel for the writ argued that these words "meant no more than that the facts shall not be re-examined; but the legality may, or a want of jurisdiction may be taken advantage of. The case may be such that the justice had no jurisdiction of the matter." The court were unanimously of the opinion that the writ ought to issue and say, "a certiorari does not go to try the merits of the question, but to see whether the limited jurisdiction have exceeded their bounds." The defect in the proceedings was that it did not appear upon their face that the defendant was a subject of the realm, which was an essential requisite.

The case of King vs. Jukes, 8 T. R., 542, was that of a conviction and an appeal to the quarter sessions, with power to hear and finally determine the matter; yet the conviction was quashed in the king's bench on certiorari, because the information did not negative an exception introduced into the statute. The objection, the court said, was one of substance, and was similar in principle to that urged against the conviction in Rex vs. Morely.

In Cates vs. Knight, 3 T. R., 442, it is said by Erskine, Shepherd, Garrow and Marryat in argument: "This is a question which goes to the jurisdiction of the court, concerning which the rule has long been settled that the superior courts at Westminster can only be ousted by express words." The reporter in a note cites the case of Rex vs. Morely above.

It will be noticed that not one of these cases goes to the extent of holding that where an inferior tribunal is proceeding within the bounds of its jurisdiction, with power to hear and finally determine its decisions can be reviewed on certiorari for error strictly, either of law or fact.

The point has been expressly ruled otherwise in People vs. Betts, 55 N. Y., 600. The court were not cited to this case by counsel, but its relevancy to the question under consideration requires that it should not be overlooked. The case was a common law certiorari to commissioners on their second report appointed to assess damages to the owner of real estate taken by a railroad company for the purposes of its road. The statute enacted that "the second report shall be final and conclusive on all the parties interested." Notwithstanding this language, it was insisted that the way was still open by a common law certiorari for a review of any legal errors committed by the commissioners even upon a second appraisal. The opinion by Mr. Justice Fol-

THE COURSE OF LEGISLATION.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S SPECIAL REPORTER.]

OLYMPIA, Dec. 3

Mr. Smith of Klickitat, with a courage deserving of special mention, introduced, just previous to the close of the last session, H. B. 216, the "Kansas prohibition act," with the hope that if it failed to pass, at least the house might place itself on record on the matter of temperance, although without doubt, several very important temperance bills have been enacted during the late session, and taken as a whole the legislature has shown decided temperance proclivities. On the last day of the session when the order of "second reading of bills" was reached, the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill to a third reading, was lost by the following vote: Ayes, Cornwall, Holcomb, Kuhn, Preston, Raymond, Smith of Klickitat, Smith of Whitman, Steen, Taylor, Van Eaton, Warman, Mr. Speaker, 12. Noes, Messrs. Alexander, Allen, Clark, Catlin, Dillon, Freeman, Judson, Karr, Kincaide, O'Neil, Rees, Smith of King—12. The vote on the matter was considered a handsome one by the temperance people, considering the fact that the advocates of the bill did not have a single chance to express their views on the subject; but strong hopes are entertained that not only this measure, but also that of woman's suffrage will meet with a favorable consideration at the hands of the next legislature.

EXTRA SESSION.

At the opening of the extra session yesterday a joint committee having been appointed to wait on the governor to ascertain his wishes, the following message from his excellency was soon afterwards received, and ordered printed by the council:

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Dec. 2, 1881.

To the members of the Council and House of Representatives—Gentlemen:—I have convened you in extra session by virtue of power vested in me by organic law, and by special authority from the president of the United States, in order that further time may be afforded to complete the revision of the statutes of Washington territory, and to legislate for their publication.

This important and laborious work has been far advanced during your regular session and nearly all of the principal measures connected therewith have become laws, and statutes have been enacted which provide for the assessment and collection of territorial and county revenue; relative to crimes, punishments and proceedings in criminal cases; to regulate the practice and proceedings in civil actions; defining the jurisdiction and practice in probate courts; relating to justices of the peace, their practice and jurisdiction; relating to liens; relating to elections and the mode of supplying vacancies; to fix the number of members of the legislative assembly and apportioning the same; to regulate suits for divorce and alimony; to define the rights of property of married persons; relating to roads and highways; and laws relating to the county officers.

Several important measures remain to be considered in connection with this revision which in addition to those here designated, when adopted, will necessitate and justify the publication in one volume, of the revised statutes of Washington Territory.

To provide for that consummation and all matters necessarily connected therewith, your careful consideration will be required.

Wishing for you the fullest success of an undertaking which will redound to your honor as representatives, and be productive of great advantages to the people whom we represent,

I am, with profound respect,
W. H. NEWELL."

As it was found unnecessary by the house to appoint a doorkeeper during the extra session, a resolution was adopted this morning specially thanking the late doorkeeper, Mr. Johnson, for his efficient services during the past session.

UNIVERSITY APPROPRIATION.

After this bill had been thought dead beyond any resurrection, all at once it loomed up again in the council yesterday and passed that body, but what its future history will be, remains in doubt. That the property is valuable and will continue so, is a foregone conclusion, and that the territory should hold it at all hazards seems to be public sentiment, but a feeling seems also to exist in the legislature that the building is useful only to Seattle, as a school provided for the benefit of the better classes. Whether it be so or not, your correspondent cannot say, but one thing is sure, that in case the territory surrenders its right to this property, Mr. Villard has signified his willingness to help the institution, as appears from a communication from that gentleman, as published a few days since.

REVENUE LAW.

Perhaps no measure during the past session met with more careful consideration at the hands of the legislature than this act, and while the present law may be slightly defective in some particulars, yet it is so much better than the law passed in 1879 that it is generally thought there will be but few complaints by the people.

All property except that belonging to the United States shall be taxed, not even excepting churches or benevolent societies.

Assessors will have to call on the taxpayer personally for his list of real estate.

All sea craft will be taxed in the county where the owner, managing owner or agent resides.

Territorial revenue will be assessed at two mills; ordinary county revenue, not to exceed eight mills; support of schools, not to exceed eight mills; roads, not to exceed five mills; roads, bridges and ferries, not to exceed two mills.

As the bill was amended several times in both houses, I am unable to give any further particulars in relation to it.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS AGAIN.

As Mother Eve was the cause of all the trouble in the Garden of Eden, it seems that her daughters are likely to cause a breeze in the legislature of Washington territory every time the name of "woman" is mentioned.

When C. B. 16 was taken up to-day, which is an act in relation to territorial librarian, Mr. Kuhn moved to amend by making provision for the holding of the office by a female, so as to legalize the governor's appointment, the appointee being a lady.

Mr. Judson opposed the insertion of any such amendment. If the appointment was illegal he did not wish to see the house stultifying itself and insulting the council by such an amendment as would prop up what, in his opinion, was illegal, and he believed it was bad taste for the gentleman to introduce the motion. He believed in letting the blame rest where it should.

Mr. Smith, of Whitman, did not believe there was any good reasons given by the previous speaker why the present incumbent should not hold the office of librarian the same as if she were a man. If there was any new matter contained in the proposed amendment he would not favor its adoption, but as he did not think there was he could see no just reason why the amendment should not carry. He believed women were just as eligible to hold office in Washington territory as men—not only the office of territorial librarian but any other office in the territory. (Great applause.)

Messrs. Warman, Holcomb, Raymond and Preston also spoke in favor of the amendment, after which it went to vote with the following result:

To amend, yeas—Messrs. Allen, Holcomb, Kincaid, Kuhn, Preston, Raymond, Smith of King, Smith of Whitman, Warman, Mr. Speaker—10.

Noes—Messrs. Alexander, Catlin, Cornwall, Judson, Karr, O'Neil, Rees, Smith of Klickitat, Steen, Taylor, VanEaton—11. Amendment lost.

Act relative to assault by word or gesture.

In relation to graded schools.
To prevent the smoking and inhaling of opium.
To pay school teachers who assist at examinations.

Preparations are being made here by the merchants and saloon keepers to carry the Sunday law into effect.

It is highly probable, unless something unusual occurs, that the extra session will close next week, many of the members being anxious to reach their homes before the frost sets in.

The bill to remove the capital from Olympia to Cheney failed to pass. So this place feels secure for a couple of years to come.

"WOMAN, WHY WEEPEST THOU?"

What David Swing Thinks is Woman's Mission.

[From a Recent Sermon at Chicago.]

It is perilous to be a sentimental person, for in man's case it sometimes leads to the cup of intemperance, and in woman's case to only the toilet or only a will æsthetic, but when the sentimental being can escape snares, and can look upon the race, that being becomes the inspiration of an age. Thinkers alone cannot make a great period. The glory of Christ was not that he knew much, but that he loved much. He magnetized the surrounding throng, and drew them up to his height by his affectionate power. The mission of the modern educated and society woman will not begin to unfold itself until she shall make fashion an amusement, an ornament rather than a pursuit. A gay life is not grand enough to be made into a calling. That heart which Christ found so full of attachment and anxiety and benevolent intervention demands the world for its field and its object of love. Nothing less is worthy of her tears and seekings in this sorrowful garden.

Meaning of the Virginia Victory.

[Staunton Valley Virginian.]

It introduces liberal methods and ideas, looking to the abatement of the obstructive and repressive agencies which have been applied to suppress or pervert the popular will, and make a mockery of the laws and constitution of the country. It matters not by what party name the result has been consummated. The principles involved constitute the merit of the success, and it is to the operation of these principles, grounded in the fundamental structure of our institutions, that the fruition of this new departure in the politics of the south must be traced.

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY.

"I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense—no one seemed to know what ailed me—that I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a bottle of Hop Bitters and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, and when I told them what had helped me they said "Hurrah for Hop Bitters! Long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy."—The Mother.—Home Journal.

A REVOLTING EFFORT.

In his defense of Guiteau, Scoville, brother-in-law of the assassin, is attacking the mental and moral integrity of the family for generations past, in order to create a presumption of insanity to save this devilish monster from the gallows. Nothing more disgusting has ever been witnessed. The Chicago Tribune has the following special report. On Scoville's own showing it is a nice family into which he has made an alliance:

Scoville proceeded to discuss the insanity of members of Guiteau's family. He would show that his grandfather was insane, and the taint ran through the family. He cited family names, Martin Luther, Abraham, etc., to show a religious mania. Also, one relative, with a well-to-do husband, had a mania that she was going to the poorhouse. Another was a bright girl up to 11 years, and then became an imbecile, and is now in an asylum. Another died insane. Another was made insane by love affairs, and the father of Guiteau had a mania that he could never die, in which he was disappointed. Mr. Scoville went on to say that the mother of defendant was, to say the least, peculiar, and that just before Guiteau was born she had a severe sickness; had brain trouble, and had to have her head shaved. The hair thus taken off would be shown in court. Thus Guiteau was born. He was a bright boy, and there was nothing wrong about him, except, perhaps, an impediment in his speech. His father whipped him for this, and whipped him as only an intensely religious man can whip, but it did not destroy the impediment. He outgrew it. One day, while at play, he was struck on the head with a stone, and thus was caused the scar which has been spoken of as the mark of some personal encounter. Mr. Scoville then detailed the history of the prisoner; how he spent his time in Freeport, copying deeds; went to Ann Arbor to school; found himself unprepared and worked hard at study and reading religious books; how the latter had a bad influence, and how he finally went to the Oneida community; lived there five years, and was fully impressed that their doctrine was right, and even expected to become the ruler of these believers in the world. The communists looked upon him as a common sort of fellow, and, to speak commonly, "sat down on him." Then he went to New York, and living on crackers and water or some other brain food, labored for months unsuccessfully to start a religious paper. While this story was being told the prisoner covered his face with his hand and laughed quietly, as if amused with the remembrance. Mr. Scoville then referred to his return to Oneida, as if in fulfillment of his wish to do what he considered to be the best thing to serve God, and he called attention to the fact that the testimony for the defense would show that all through his life his great motive power had been what he thought the Lord wanted him to do. He only left the community because he was literally oppressed by some of the customs of the colony, and when he did leave it, it was with a feeling that he was departing from the way to heaven.

The supremacy in favor of Hub Punch with hot or ice water, milk, etc., is a fact generally admitted by connoisseurs. Taken hot it will dissipate chills and colds.

THE ASSASSIN.

Not a Good Actor.

[Christian Union.]

Mr. Guiteau's boisterous proceedings in the court room produce on the public an impression that he is playing the part of insanity and is not a very good actor.

Might do it Again.

[Chicago Times.]

There is not only surprising method in the man's alleged madness, but, seen through the method a touch of viciousness that discloses a vindictive spirit quite adequate, in a character with so little moral foundation, to the "removal" of another president who should furnish him the motive by refusing to recognize his "claims" to consideration and recompense for political services rendered.

Knew what he was About.

[Cincinnati Gazette.]

Does he know when he kills that he does that for which the penalty is hanging? Then he should be hanged, no matter what insane pranks he may play. It is necessary to him, and to restrain others like him. Does the manslayer know the law's consequences of his deeds? Then the consequence should follow. Even raving maniacs are subject to fear of punishment. The threat of the whip is a terror to them.

Poor Acting.

[Syracuse Standard.]

His frequent, flippant, half jocose allusions to the Almighty have no sound of sincerity. He has a studied part, poorly played. Then there is too much inventiveness, too large a display of tricks for a man who is serenely reposing on the omnipotent. He was too eager to obtain the help of the most skillful finite minds, and all through his confinement in jail he has shown anything but reliance on the spirit. His strong tower has been the Washington jail and the federal guards. Even before the shooting he endeavored to examine the prison to make sure that an insane would be safe from the mob. No religious fanatic ever behaved in that way.

Overdoing It.

[Philadelphia Times.]

Charles J. Guiteau is overdoing the crazy dodge. His madness is assuming entirely too much method to be available in his present important crisis.

Sane Enough to See the Points.

[Cincinnati Commercial.]

Guiteau is sane enough to see all the points which will work to his advantage. He seems to have more to do with the management of his case than his brother-in-law. When a man is mentally able to judge of the effect of his acts, as this evident Guiteau is, we do not see how he can be declared irresponsible for them.

"Jim" Keene, the stock broker, was once a stationery peddler in San Francisco. He saved a little money and put it in the Savage mine just as it was being pooled, and he thereby cleared nearly $1,000,000.

EQUITABLE
LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY,
120 Broadway, New York.
LIFE INSURANCE PROFITS DEMONSTRATED BY ACTUAL SETTLEMENTS MADE IN 1880.
The Society is now paying maturing Tontine Policies with the following remarkable results:
POLICIES CARRIED TEN YEARS WITH THE RETURN OF ALL PREMIUMS PAID AND INTEREST THEREON.
1st Example: Policy No. 43,561, issued May 23, '69. Amount...$10,000 00
Total premiums paid (11 years)...5,294 60
The assured is now entitled to draw, in cash, $6,455.80, having had besides $10,000 of assurance for eleven years. 115 per cent. of premiums paid, returnable in cash.
This example and those which follow show that LARGER PROFITS ARE PAID POLICY-HOLDERS THAN ARE NOW DECLARED BY ANY OTHER COMPANY.
2d Example: Policy No. 56,542, issued Dec. 30, 1870. Endowment 20 years. Tontine Period 10 years. Amount...$10,000 00
Total premiums paid (10 years)...7,330 00
The assured on Dec. 30, 1880, will be entitled to draw cash, $9,033 30, 120 per cent of the premiums paid. These results, although predicted by carefully made estimates, are
NOT ESTIMATES, BUT ACTUAL CASH RETURNS.
3d Example: Policy No. 41,031, issued March 27, '69. Amount...$5,000 00
Total premiums paid...2,908 95
In this case the assured withdrew, March 27, 1880, in cash, $3,312 45, being 114 per cent. of premiums paid. Many policies will be thus paid in 1881, showing
CASH RETURNS OF FROM 100 TO 120 PER CENT. OF THE PREMIUMS PAID.
Assets securely invested of $43,000,000. Surplus, nearly $10,000,000. The Society's popularity is shown by the fact that for the past eleven years the total amount of new policies issued has been greater than that of any other company in existence, thus making its average ANNUAL NEW BUSINESS LARGER THAN THAT OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.
The Society pays death claims promptly and in full. Its policies are clear and concise, and with no unreasonable conditions.
EVERY POLICY BECOMES INCONTESTABLE AFTER THREE YEARS.

TUESDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 6, 1881.

UNMASKS HIMSELF.

Guiteau's conduct in his trial shows that he has studied well his part. Evidently he has been prompted and drilled by intelligent and cunning counsel. Craft and skill were never more manifest. Through his severe cross-examination by Judge Porter the part he is acting was completely laid bare. The dogged pertinacity with which he held to his assertion that he had no conception of the question of right or wrong in connection with his murderous act, the persistent iteration that his mind was a "total blank" on that subject, and the passionate vehemence with which he tried to repel every attempt to question him closely on the subject, all show that he had deliberately taken his stand on that mode of defense, and had resolved to adhere to it as his best hope and to the very last. In this his deliberation and purpose have utterly overthrown the theory of an irresponsible insanity. No one actually insane could form such a conception and adhere to it; no one actually insane could be drilled in it and not forget his part. He can repeat, or "reword" his matter every time, which, as Hamlet says, "madness would gambol from." In no part of his conduct since he conceived the murder has he shown more deliberation or firmness of purpose than in his resolve to make it appear that he has no conception of the wickedness of his crime. He has protested too much, he has overacted his part, which actual insanity never does.

The evidence that he was mentally responsible when he perpetrated the act is overwhelming. It begins from his conduct long prior to the murder. One who has carefully noted the whole progress of the case gives this lucid summary:

1. He was able to plan the act. All his movements showed careful premeditation. He followed the president for weeks; several times refrained from shooting him for fear of injuring bystanders or out of pity for his wife, and reasoned the matter out coherently, keeping his own counsel till the deed was done.

2. He was able to appreciate the political and personal consequences of the act. He knew that Arthur would become president. There was no evidence of insanity in his declaration to that effect. He knew also that the first result of the shooting would be to put himself in great bodily danger, and he provided for his safety by engaging a carriage beforehand to take him to jail as soon as he had fired the shot. All this was logical and coherent.

3. Since the assassination he realizes his danger, and cowers and shrinks when he passes through the crowds in going to and returning from the court; and he shows his sound sense in so doing.

4. His attempt to shirk responsibility upon the Almighty is another proof of his perfect sanity. If he were really insane he would glory in his deed, and be unwilling to share the fame of it even with Deity.

5. None of these performances touch the real question of his ability to appreciate the consequences of his acts. Eccentricity is not a sufficient ground for acquittal in murder cases. Guiteau has as yet done nothing insane in court or out of it, unless the murder of the president should be so considered; and proof of insanity cannot be deduced solely from the enormity of a crime. It will not do to argue that every assassin is prima facie insane.

Members of his family who are now trying to make it appear that he is insane never claimed till after he had murdered President Garfield that his mind was really off its poise. They regarded him only as queer, cranky, and worthless. It never occurred to them that he was a proper subject for an insane asylum. Many witnesses have been called to establish the theory of the defense, but their testimony was very disappointing to the assassin's counsel, and not less so to the assassin himself. Here also is another most significant fact. Who ever before saw a prisoner on trial, in whose behalf the plea of insanity was set up, who constantly showed his disappointment and anger when the witness did not bear testimony to his liking? No insane man ever behaved or could behave in such a manner. If the jury in this case do not prove to be a jury of exceptional stupidity, it will find no difficulty whatever. The desperate efforts put forth by this assassin himself to make it appear that he is insane completely unmask him.

FUTURE OF THE INDIAN RACES.

It might be supposed from the rapid diminution of the numbers of our Indians that the remnants of the tribes would in a few years more become wholly extinct. Our early settlers saw them here in large numbers, but nearly all have perished. Whole tribes have utterly disappeared. Of others only a few individuals remain. Taking the territory now embraced within the limits of Oregon and Washington, it is not probable that more than one Indian remains where twenty existed forty years ago. It might be inferred from this rapid decrease that in a few years the remains of all the native tribes would wholly disappear. But experience with Indians shows that this supposition would be an error. Disappearance of the Indian races is indeed probable, but it will be a long time coming, and will be effected by amalgamation with the whites rather than by direct extinction. Remnants of tribes still exist in many of the older states—in New York, Connecticut, North Carolina, and more numerous bodies in Michigan and Wisconsin. For years some of them have not decreased in numbers, and in a few cases the septs show an actual increase. Others, however, whose numbers are reduced very low, promise soon to disappear altogether. In Connecticut, for example, there remains a fragment of the ancient tribe of the Pequods. They reside on a "reservation," which has been reduced by frequent grants and sales to about three hundred acres, which contains six dwelling houses, five inhabited and one empty. The land is mostly mountain, and is valuable on account of its timber, the annual sales of which are sufficient to maintain the "tribe." The property is managed by an "overseer," who is a white man, appointed by the governor of the state. He makes annual reports of his stewardship in triplicate, one copy of which is sent to the secretary of state, one to the district court of Litchfield county, and one to the town clerk of Kent, in which the property is situate. This is a tribe which has been reduced so low in numbers that it must soon become extinct. It now musters only forty individuals. But the history of the tribe for many years past shows that its decay is not owing to an excess of deaths over births, but to the fact of intermarriages with the "low class of whites," who remove elsewhere with their families, and thus become blended with the general community. Not exceeding four persons of unmixed Indian blood belonging to the tribe are known to exist, and the greater number of those on the reservation can not be distinguished from white people. Like the Naragansetts, of Massachusetts, and other tribal remains in New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, the Pequods have disappeared, not by death but by amalgamation. To no small extent this amalgamation takes place wherever the races come in contact. But where the strength of the native tribes is yet considerable, as on the reservations in most of the states and territories of the west, absorption by amalgamation with the whites is slow. Protected and cared for, the numbers of unmixed blood are usually maintained, and even in many instances show some increase. Yet in the progress of time contact with the whites will undoubtedly make inroads upon them; and very probably, after the reservations are broken up and the lands are given to the Indians in severalty, amalgamation with the whites will become quite rapid. The difference of degree between the Indians and many classes of whites will gradually disappear, particularly after the Indians become citizens, learn to live by their own labor, manage their own property, and come into free intercourse with the whites around them. By some intelligent statisticians it is claimed that there are more persons with Indian blood in their veins in some localities on the eastern side of the continent than there were Indians at the time of the first white settlements. They say there is no question but such is the fact in Maryland and in several parts of Virginia.

PRICE OF NEWSPAPERS.

Complaint is made by some that THE OREGONIAN is not furnished at so low a price as some of the journals of San Francisco. The answer is a simple one. San Francisco is quite a large city. A paper published there may circulate ten times as many copies as a paper published here. San Francisco has 250,000 people. Portland has 20,000. Within three hours of San Francisco there are 300,000 more. So that papers published in San Francisco can address 500,000 to 600,000 people on the morning of publication. But there are not 30,000, (including the population of Portland) whom a paper published here can reach in three hours after it leaves the press. Again, as San Francisco is a large commercial city, the income of a newspaper from advertising there is ten times as great as any newspaper could possibly obtain here. The advertising rates easily obtained by the San Francisco papers are on an average four times as great as THE OREGONIAN can possibly obtain. But our telegraphic expenses are as large as those of any San Francisco paper, printers' rates are as high, and all other expenses are as great in proportion. Here, then, are the reasons why THE OREGONIAN cannot be furnished at fifteen cents a week. Given a million people, who can be reached by THE OREGONIAN on the day of publication—and this is the advantage which San Francisco papers enjoy—and it will become at once a better paper than any published in that city, and will be furnished at as low a price. At present it would be simply impossible to publish this paper or any general newspaper in Portland at fifteen cents a week. There are not people enough to buy it, nor business enough to furnish it with advertisements at paying rates. Portland could no more support the newspapers of a large city than it could support the hotels of a large city. Nothing is more unreasonable than to expect it. A complete and at the same time a cheap newspaper can exist only where it may find a multitude of readers, and where trade, commerce and the multiplied wants of the community create an advertising business which can be found in no small city, and at rates which business in no small city will pay. The population of Portland and the surrounding country must be multiplied by ten, and the volume of general business must be multiplied by twenty, before the Call and Chronicle of San Francisco could be published here at fifteen cents a week. But even these papers, since San Francisco is only a third rate city, are far from being great newspapers. They are much further behind the papers of Chicago than THE OREGONIAN is behind them.

It is shown by the San Francisco Chronicle that the Pacific coast sugar monopoly sells to merchants in Denver and Kansas City, places from 1500 to 2060 miles away, for three cents a pound less than to merchants in San Francisco and elsewhere on the Pacific coast. They do this to catch the trade of the cities named, whose merchants otherwise would buy from Chicago or St. Louis, where the rates are 2½ cents a pound less than those fixed by the San Francisco monopoly. Beyond doubt the trade of Denver and Kansas City must be profitable to the Pacific coast ring, even at the low rate, or they would not contend for it. If the monopoly can afford to sell in those cities at three cents a pound less than at home, they could afford to sell to home consumers—since they got the sugar duty free—at five cents a pound less than we are paying for it. The profit is enormous, since it covers a consumption of 80,000,000 pounds of sugar a year. What Pacific coast member will introduce a resolution to terminate the monopoly treaty with Hawaii at the earliest moment? Will not an Oregon senator, or the Oregon representative, do it?

The special census report of Prof. Pumpelly on the copper mining industries east of the 100th meridian has been issued. It shows that the value of copper production for the year ending June 1, 1880, was $8,842,961 from 82 mines, distributed as follows: Michigan, $7,979,232; Vermont, $469,495; North Carolina, $350,000; Missouri, $25,730; Maine, $10,125; Pennsylvania, $5630, and the balance from small mines in Wisconsin and Maryland. The number of employes was 6118. The mines west of the Rocky mountains was not included in the above report. There are valuable deposits in California and Arizona; and remarkably rich ones in Idaho near Brownlee's ferry on Snake river. The latter deposit was worked a little in 1878 by some parties in Montana, but abandoned afterwards, as the product was valueless so far away from cheap transportation. It is an industry which will be very important when the multiplication of railroads gives that section of country proper facilities for transportation of ore to a market. In the meantime this industry on the Pacific coast must remain secondary to the operations of more valuable mines.

The colony system of settlement, which has long been a favorite method of immigration in the states and territories east of the Rocky mountains, is extending itself westward, and several colonies are securing locations in Montana along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad. The colony plan has many advantages over the "go-it-alone" style of immigration, and a great portion of the marvelous growth of Kansas and similar sections has been due to its superiority. At present the lack of adequate facilities has prevented an adoption of that plan in immigration to Oregon and Washington, with a slight exception or two, but the progress of the Northern Pacific shows that it is only a question of time when the northwest will be benefited by its operation, as colonies always follow close upon extension of railway lines.

The press and public men of Texas deny the report that public sentiment there favors a division of the state and the creation of three additional states out of the territory. Journals declare that no man could be elected to office who was suspected of favoring a division of the state, so strong is public opinion against it. In a short time, with her large territory, immense capabilities, and the vast and constantly growing number of persons seeking a home in her borders, Texas will become the empire state of the south if not of the union. She is an empire within herself. Her prominent men are not office seekers, who would see her shorn of her greatness and the influence she must exercise in the near future, for the selfish gratification of being state officers and United States senators.

Our trade with Mexico for the current year will foot up about $6,000,000, of which one-sixth has been done with New Orleans. Drummers from that city are constantly traversing all parts of Mexico, with very gratifying results. From New Orleans there's one line of steamers to Matamoras and two to Vera Cruz, thus reaching a rich and populous country.

The treasury department has decided to resume the coinage of nickels. The order to the Philadelphia mint to go ahead in this work will be issued at once. The old nickel-copper cents which contain 12½ per cent. nickel, and the mutilated 5-cent nickel pieces in the possession of the treasury, will be used in the renewed coinage of the 5-cent nickel.

Gen. Keifer, nominated by the republican caucus for speaker of the house, is a lawyer of considerable reputation in Ohio, was a brigadier general during the war, and has served three terms in the lower house of congress.

Guiteau, as a "stalwart," seems to have taken his views concerning Secretary Blaine from General Grant, and to be quite as ready and rancorous as Grant in expressing them.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.—On Sunday night at Oregon City died Jennings McCarver, a well-known citizen, who came to this state in 1845, and was widely known as a very worthy gentleman. He was the son of the late Gen. M. M. McCarver of Tacoma, and a brother of Mrs. Prosch, wife of the editor of the Seattle Intelligencer. For some months he has been confined to his bed with the insidious disease which at length overpowered his broken constitution. He bore his long period of suffering with stoical fortitude and passed away from earth like one who has laid up his treasures above. His funeral will take place at Oregon City this morning.

OFFICERS CHOSEN.—Last night Multnomah Lodge No. 48, A. O. U. W., chose the following officers: Master Workman, Aaron Fox; foreman, N. H. Reot; overseer, Samuel Parker; recorder, J. W. Watson; receiver, Wm. Pfunder; financier, S. Fox; guide, A. Barlett; I. W., I. Isaacs; O. W. trustee and medical examiner, Dr. C. H. Wheeler.

THE REFORM SCHOOL.—The committee consisting of Messrs. T. L. Eliot, D. P. Thompson, S. W. Rice, M. W. Fechheimer and W. B. Gilbert appointed to report on the advisability of establishing a reform school under the organization of 1872 have had two meetings, and will probably recommend that such steps be immediately taken.

INJURED.—Mr. J. G. Fairfowl, the well-known stevedore, while stepping from a vessel to Flanders's dock, missed his footing and fell a short distance, alighting on his back. His spine was severely wrenched, and he will be confined to his room several days, possibly for weeks.

SOMERS AGAIN.—It appears that Thos. Somers is determined to make trouble for his bondsmen. Yesterday Butler, one of his sureties, asked to be released, and had been all day trying to find Somers and give him up to the authorities, but was unsuccessful in the search.

NAME CHANGED.—Permission having been granted by the authorities at Washington, the name of the steamer California, plying between this port and Alaska, has been changed to "Eureka." She will hereafter be called by her new name in THE OREGONIAN.

THIS MORNING'S ALARM.—The alarm turned in from box 8, Tenth and Morrison streets, this morning at ten minutes past one o'clock, was the work of some hoodlum, who broke the door of the alarm box, evidently from pure meanness.

MEETINGS.—The Guild of St. Stephen's chapel will meet this day at 3 o'clock; and the Mite society on Thursday, at the house of Mrs. Rosenberg, corner of Market and Seventh. Punctual attendance is requested at both meetings.

LITTLE HOPE.—The condition of Mr. E. J. W. Stemme was slightly better last night, but his physicians—Drs. J. A. Chapman and J. T. Ghiselin—have only slender hope that he may recover. His illness is typhoid fever.

RECOGNIZED.—The Pomeroy (Washington territory) Independent is the first newspaper to recognize the name of the county of Garfield, and has changed the name of Columbia in its head lines to the former.

LECTURE.—Rev. J. A. Gray will deliver a lecture Friday evening of this week at the Baptist church, for the benefit of the ladies' aid society. His subject is "Currents and Counter Currents."

THE STREET RAILWAY SCHEME

DISCUSSED BY THE COUNCIL AND THE COMPANY.

Five Cents Only for a Ride, and Two Miles to be Built Next Year—Routes Agreed Upon, etc., etc.

The directors of the Willamette Street Railway and the council committee consisting of Messrs. Keller, Hewett, Holman, Honeyman and Gardes have had two conferences and drew up an ordinance deemed satisfactory to the city and the railway company. Following are the routes agreed upon:

First.—Along North Front street from its intersection with North Fifteenth street to its intersection with North Third street, thence along North Third and South Third streets to the city limits.

Second.—From the intersection of North Sixth and North Front streets, along North Sixth, Sixth and South Sixth streets to the city limits.

Third.—From the intersection of North Ninth and Q streets, along North Ninth street and Eighth street to its southern terminus.

Fourth.—From the intersection of North Front street with the extension of North Fifteenth street along North Fifteenth street to its intersection with P street, thence along P street to its intersection with North Thirteenth street, thence along North Thirteenth and Twelfth streets to its intersection with Hall street, thence along Hall street to its intersection with Front street, thence along Front street to its intersection with Lincoln street, thence along Lincoln street to its intersection with the macadam road.

Fifth.—From the intersection of North Front and N streets along N street to the city limits.

Sixth.—From the intersection of B and First street along B street and Barnes county road to the city limits.

Seventh.—From the intersection of North Eighteenth and N streets along North Eighteenth and Fourteenth streets to its intersection with Morrison street; thence along Morrison street to its intersection with Front street; thence along Front street to its intersection with Main street; thence along Main street to its intersection with Twelfth street.

Eighth.—Commencing at the intersection of the east line of the city park and the county road known as the canyon road; thence easterly along said county road and Jefferson street to its intersection with Tenth street; thence along Tenth street to its intersection with Clay street; thence along Clay street to its intersection with Water street; thence along Water street and the macadam road to the city limits.

The city requires that the company build at least two miles east and west before January 1, 1883, and five miles in all within five years, and that five cents be the maximum fare; failure to comply with these provisions to work a forfeiture of the charter. To this the company has, of course, consented.

The two miles to be built next year will be located where public convenience will be best served. It is understood that the committee will report to the council to-morrow night, and that final action will be taken before the close of this month. The promoters of this important enterprise are in earnest, and if the charter be granted will commence work immediately. The prospect of being able to get to any part of the city without the cost of carriage hire, or the certainty in winter of muddy shoes and garments, is very gratifying.

NEW MARKET THEATER.

The bitter cold and pelting rain of last night kept a good many away from the theater, and though the orchestra seats were nearly empty the dress circle showed a fair and fashionable attendance. The play was "Othello," which Mr. Sheridan had played on a former visit to this place, and hence there was less anxiety to hear him. His rendition of the Moor was not a companion picture to his Lear and Richelieu, in our opinion. He ranted through the stormy scenes so as to be almost unintelligible to a person unfamiliar with the text. Mr. Colton has been very unwell for several days, and a man of less nerve would have thrown up the part, but he stuck it out bravely and gave us a very acceptable Iago. He played the treacherous Venitian in a very subdued style till the last act, and then let his villainy burst suddenly on the audience with startling effect. The ladies were very felicitous in their rendition of their parts. Miss Davenport's Desdemona was given in all the innocence of the high-born Venitian girl, and we have never seen the part more prettily dressed. Miss Holbrook's Emilia was a grand bit of acting, and she was loudly applauded in all her leading speeches. She improves on acquaintance certainly and is already a prime favorite with the Portland public. Both these ladies came here perfect strangers, but their careful acting has made them a host of friends and they can always rely on a cordial reception in Portland. The company open at Reed's opera house, Salem, to-night, in "King Lear."

THREE EASTERN OREGON COUNTIES.

An Estimate of the Arable Lands and Productive Capacity of Union, Umatilla and Baker Counties.

BY REV. GEO. H. ATKINSON.

Umatilla county borders the Columbia river and the line of Washington territory 120 miles. It contains 181 townships, an area of 6516 square miles, or 4,170,240 acres, being one and a half times the size of Connecticut, or about five times that of Rhode Island. The soil is of the same quality as that of Walla Walla, Columbia and Whitman counties. All the cereals grow well, including corn; vegetables and fruits thrive. Timber culture is a success on those treeless plains. What was called a pasture land, fit only for flocks and herds, is fast becoming an unbroken series of farms, chiefly remarkable now as luxuriant wheat fields. They are of gentle slope, or more grandly swelling into well-rounded hills, cultivated to the top and on all sides. In future, no doubt, these wheat farms will be used for a larger variety of crops, suited to stock feeding and fattening in winter, and to more varied and continued markets. The tests of soil and climate assure all kinds of products common to farms.

Productive fields now begin to appear on the lands bordering the Columbia river. These have been called sand wastes, worthless except for wintering stock. It is safe to predict that these sage brush deserts, covering about 24 townships—equal to 864 square miles or 653,000 acres—will be largely redeemed by the plough. They are the lower benches of like soil, with the upper benches already found to be so productive a part, only containing more river wash, sand and gravel, and a larger per cent. of the alkalies in some places. The large dry farm, owned and cultivated by Portland capitalists, midway between Umatilla and Pendleton, which last year yielded little more than the seed, this year, as reported, returned about 25 bushels per acre.

This test shows what harvests are possible on those dry benches. Other tests will doubtless be made even to the river, and as no failure has occurred or has been reported in the upper basin of the Columbia, where the plough and harrow have been faithfully used and where wheat has been sown in the fall, we may expect success on these lower dry plains of Umatilla county.

Eureka flat in Walla Walla, Columbia county, lying 60 miles nearly parallel with Snake river, high and dry and forbidding, furnished 1500 sacks of wheat for shipment last year and 34,000 sacks this year, as reported by Capt. G. Gore. This illustrates possible harvests from equally dry and distrusted lands. The upper benches of Umatilla, far up the hills towards the Blue mountains, give sure and large crops. Dr. Blalock's large farm and others beyond furnish annual proofs of this statement.

WHEAT CAPACITY OF UMATILLA COUNTY.

This cereal may be taken to represent all the rest. From tests already made we may estimate one-third of that county, or 60 townships, as farming land. These contain 2160 square miles, or 1,382,400 acres, which, at an average of 20 bushels per acre, would produce 27,648,000 bushels. About twelve townships are included in the Indian reservation, of which about seven are good farming lands, amounting to 160,200 acres. Suppose that Congress grants to those 400 Indians 160 acres each for a farm, according to the terms of the senate bill last winter, 96,200 acres would remain for sale to the whites. If these Indians become farmers like others, their harvests will combine to give these possible results. In this estimate we allow two-thirds, or 120 townships, of the county to be mountain, timber and pasture land, and rocky regions, amounting to 4320 square miles, or 2,764,800 acres. These represent untold and unknown values of forests and grasses and minerals.

UNION COUNTY.

It contains 150 townships, or 5400 square miles, about one-fourth more than the state of Connecticut, or an area of 3,456,000 acres. It consists largely of mountains, high prairies and bench lands and narrow valleys. It is hard to find the amount of tillable land in the county. The Grand Ronde valley is the most known. Its estimated area is 14 by 24 miles, or 336 square miles, or about 215,000 acres. It is 2600 feet above the sea, yet being embosomed in the mountains it is warm enough to produce all the small cereals, vegetables and fruits in abundance. Its wheat power ranges from 30 to 40 bushels per acre. We may estimate its farm lands and those of the North Powder river and other near valleys to be 200,000 acres with a wheat capacity of 20 bushels per acre, which under full cultivation would yield 4,000,000 bushels. But its distance from market and the cost of transportation by wagons over mountains 5000 feet high preclude efforts to raise wheat except for local consumption. The proposed railroad from Umatilla to Baker City opens a better outlook for the farming interests of these valleys. The mountain forests and pasture lands add a large factor to the business and value of the county. Wallowa valley has ten surveyed townships of farming and pasture lands, now secluded and difficult of ingress or egress, but it awaits the light draught steamboat up the Snake river to the mouth of the Grand Ronde or the Imnaha as an outlet.

BAKER COUNTY.

It contains 442 townships or 15,912 square miles, an area of 10,183,680 acres. The elevation at Baker City—in the northern part—is 3628 feet above the sea. Yet the cereals and vegetables have been tested with success in the Powder river, Burnt river, Malheur river and Owyhee river valleys and their tributaries.

DRY SAGE BRUSH LANDS.

These look forbidding. They are distrusted, yet on trial they prove to be rich in wheat producing power. A few fields in the Powder river valley, recovered from sage brush, are samples of what can be done with the plough on plains now held as mere stock ranges.

FLOUR.

The best brands of flour come from the mills in that valley. The miller at Prineville, 155 miles west by south from Baker City, declares that the best wheat comes from the dry sage brush plains, which are found there to be 2400 feet above the ocean level. These plains are in Baker county, intersected by large streams and their affluents, all tributary to the Snake river on the east border. They extend among the hill and mountain ranges 200 miles south of Baker City to the Nevada line. They are now pasture lands for flocks and herds, which are fast eating out the bunch grass and leaving them drier and more forbidding. The farmer must follow the stock raiser in order to restore them with the plough. In other words, the stock men who become stock farmers and lay up abundant stores of food in summer for their cattle and sheep in winter, will improve the quality more than they will lose in quantity. They will finally drift into wheat growing, as an important factor of industry, and follow the steps of the men who made their early fortunes in stock raising in Walla Walla and Columbia counties, but now make their largest ventures in wheat and other cereals. Where bunch grass has grown wheat will grow. It will not be a surprise five years hence to meet wheat-laden trains hastening to the Columbia along the line from Pendleton to Boise City, and to hear choice brands of Powder river flour quoted in the Liverpool market.

WHEAT CAPACITY.

Suppose this cereal to represent all the rest—barley, oats and rye, and estimate only one-fourth of the ten millions of acres in Baker county as tillable, at the rate of twenty bushels per acre, its capacity would be fifty millions of bushels.

OBJECTIONS.

Two questions or doubts act as a bar to this supposition. The first is that the water supply is not sufficient for crops, or hardly for stock range. But its elevation favors condensation. Its interlacing mountain ranges are condensers. In summer they are thick set with finest grasses. Dews are frequent. In early autumn their crests are snow-covered, while the valleys and rolling prairies are wet with frequent showers. These prepare the soil for the plough and for sowing winter wheat, which insures the best harvest. The vapors are abundant in the air 300 miles from the Pacific ocean; and more in summer than in winter, because of the greater heat. Air can carry four times more invisible vapor at 70 deg. than at 32 deg., and nine times more at 100 deg. than at 32 deg., and its power of absorbing and holding vapor invisibly increases in greater ratio as its temperature rises. This sanitary power of the air makes life possible and endurable in the desert regions of Asia and Africa. On the contrary, a cool mountain or high plain condenses this vapor, nourishes the grasses with dews, supplies the springs and rivulets all the year. When these highlands are well plowed and harrowed and the soil made light and spongy before seeding, the air with its vapor enters the pores or interstices between the granules of earth. These being cooler condense the vapor and deposit moisture, especially during a summer night. This accounts for moist ruts in dusty and sandy roads on a July morning. It accounts for cool springs and ponds and lakelets on hill and mountain tops. They are constantly fed from the skies. The vapor supply of Baker and Union counties will be found sufficient. Its winter snows are proof.

FROSTS.

But the second fear is that valleys 3600 feet and hills 4000 feet above the sea are too high for farms. Summer nights will be cool. Frosts and snows will come early and continue late. Fruit trees must have sheltered valleys, preventing too much radiation and inviting those light fogs which on a summer and autumn morning hover about the niches between the hills and mountains. These white cloud wisps are the aerial feathery coverings which protect tender plants and fruits. They vanish with the sun and return with the night. They distil the dews and give off heat with every drop condensed. They increase with fields and orchards and timber culture. Thus the cultivation of a region increases the dew-fall and the fogs, and diminishes the frosts. Man by his skill and industry can make the skies over his head more genial and the earth under his feet surer of abundant harvests.

THE MOUNTAINS.

The Blue mountains are central and highest of the region. Their estimated extent is 200 miles northeast and southwest, with an average width of thirty miles, making an area of 6000 square miles. They are covered with evergreen forests of valuable timber and fuel. The ranges which radiate from these many miles in various directions will enlarge this estimate and assure ample lumber and fuel supplies for generations.

MINERALS.

For twenty years or more gold and silver have been sought and mined in these mountain regions. The annual product has not been large but regular. Confidence rather increases in these mining enterprises, so that some men seem content to make them a life business. There seems an agreement in the theory of geologists and the practical tests of experts. The one counts the vast basalt dykes 30 to 200 miles long and 100 to 500 feet deep, as the lavas of volcanoes poured out of the earth's hot caverns and running down the beds of ancient streams and rivers and slowly cooling into immense slags, like molten iron from a furnace.

Under these, or in the deeper crevices of older rocks, the expert searches for the precious metals. If I have rightly understood one of these gentlemen, he has traced the bed of such an ancient river with its black sand and rich quartz veins, under the Nevadas, with a spur in Jackson county under the coast range, and another under the Cascades and Blue mountains to the Snake river.

Portland capital is said to be invested in this search and discovery at various points.

OUTLOOK.

The varied resources of this region enlist our own citizens and distant companies of capitalists. Some buy stocks, some farms, some mines and some timber lands. The result bids fair in every line to reward the investors who have the energy to work and wait. Life is too real to give large returns to those who will not dig for hid treasures. These eastern counties are too rugged to reward mere explorers with fortunes. But men of industry, economy and perseverance are winning good homes and a competence.

Frothingham's Remarkable Admissions.

[Boston Transcript.]

Rev. O. B. Frothingham's exposition of his experience, as affecting his views upon religious matters, is among the most remarkable utterances of American opinions in later times.

THE MAYORALTY CASE.

[Concluded from First Page.]

ger says, "We fail to see how exemption is attained from the express prohibition of the statute that the second report shall be final and conclusive on all the parties interested, any more by a common law certiorari than by any other proceeding for a review and correction of error. The office of a common law certiorari is in strictness merely to bring up the record of the proceedings of an inferior court or tribunal to enable the court of review to determine whether the former had proceeded within its jurisdiction, and not to correct mere errors in its proceedings." The learned judge then goes on to show how the original office of the writ had been extended in New York by judicial decisions, and only to bring up the naked question of jurisdiction, but the evidence as well as the ground or principles on which the inferior jurisdiction acted, and the questions of law on which the relator relies." Further on he says: "And when the statute says that the second appraisal shall be final and conclusive, it is not that it means only to refuse that mode of remedy (appeal), but that it means to deny any remedy. Nor do any of the decisions above cited authorize, hold or intimate that in such case the common law writ of certiorari may be availed of to review erroneous decisions or proceedings of boards or inferior tribunals."

The weight of this authority presses heavily against the case made for the appellant. The distinguished and able counsel who appeared for the appellant were unable to find an authority that showed or tended to show that legal errors committed by an inferior tribunal proceeding within the bounds of its jurisdiction can be reviewed on certiorari when the statute makes such tribunal the final judge of the matter submitted to its decision. The only semblance of an authority for such a position was a dictum from State vs. Cockrell, 2 Richardson (S. C.), which counsel did not note had been overruled in ex parte Childs, 12 S. C. 111.

In the case of ex parte Heath 3, Hill 50, the relator claimed to have been elected assessor of the sixth ward of New York. It was the duty of the mayor to administer the oath of office, which he refused to do, because in the special return of one election made to him by the board of canvassers they said they were unable to declare what persons were elected "by reason of the lawless violence committed upon the inspectors of the first district whilst in the act of counting the ballots, and the dispersion of the ballots before they were counted: the history of which is contained in the return of said inspectors, a copy whereof is hereto annexed."

There were four districts in the ward, from three of which regular returns were made and received by the mayor. The relator moved for a writ of mandamus to be directed to the mayor, commanding him to administer the oath of office to the relator, and the court directed the writ to issue, because the failure to make the return from the first district did not annul the election. Among other things it was urged by counsel that exclusive cognizance of all questions concerning elections belonged to the common council. The court did not deem the question on the application for the mandamus identical with the question of election, but referring to the words, each board shall be the judges of the qualifications of its members, were of the opinion that it would be difficult to show that the enactment amounted to anything more than the bestowment of a power concurrent with its own. The words did not, like that of the charter of the charter of 1730, speak of a sole power in the common council. Commenting on that charter, they then go on to say, "If the words of the charter had or came afterwards to have the force of a statute, still it might be answered that it contains no clause, expressly denying to the king's bench, or the court holding its place, the exercise of its general power in the particular place. The word solely might, by a liberal construction, imply an intent to take away the power. So might a statute declaring the decision of an inferior court conclusive or final be construed to take from this court the power to review the decision by certiorari. But it has been held that these, or the like words, shall not be construed to oust the superior court of its supervising power; and that to give a statute such an effect the legislature must say in so many words that they intended to take the power away." Lawton vs Com. of Cambridge, 2 Cain's Rep. 179; The King vs Com. of Fens, 2 Keble 43; Rex vs Morely, above.

These views as construed for appellant are irreconcilable with the decision of Mr. Justice Folger in 56 N. Y. But in fact there is no conflict between them as may be readily shown. The opinion in ex parte Heath was written by Mr. Justice Cowan, and the same judge gave the opinion of the court in ex parte Mayor of Albany 23, Wen. 277, 287, and he there cites the case cited by him above, from 2 Keble, which was a question whether the commissioners had pursued their power, and says, this case "declares another principle which has been held by this court, that a writ of certiorari will lie to an inferior tribunal, even though the act by which it was created declared its adjudication to be final. Lawton vs Com. of Cambridge 2 Cain's Rep. 179. In 2 Keble it was held so though the act declared the proceeding should be without appeal. This was a vigorous assertion of jurisdiction, but the compass of the writ is carefully limited at the same time, as we have lately held it in a series of cases." The amount of this is that we will not in any case go beyond the question of power, which is another word for jurisdiction."

The opinion of the same judge in Birdsell vs. Philips, 1 Wen., is explicit that the erroneous decision of an inferior tribunal upon questions either of law or fact cannot be reviewed on certiorari. "This writ," he says, "is but an emanation from the general supervisory duty of the supreme court to restrain the action of all inferior magistrates within their legal grasp. "Thus it clearly appears that by his language in ex parte Heath, he meant no more than that the writ lay where the inferior tribunal exceeded its legal bounds.

In Lawton vs. Com. of Cambridge, 2 Cain's Rep. 179, the commissioners of highways had laid out a highway which, on appeal to the judges of the common pleas had been confirmed, and the statute declared the decision of the judges conclusive. The court take it as well settled that a certiorari will lie even where the inferior tribunal is authorized finally to hear and determine. But, as in all other cases, the objection made to the proceedings, though not sustained, were deemed jurisdictional, counsel saying, "for as the whole proceeding is in derogation of the rights of individuals, nothing can be taken by way of intendment." "On the face of the return it appears that the road was laid out contrary to law."

The cases of Leroy vs. the Mayor, etc., 20 John, 43; and the People vs. Assessors, 3 Lansing, add nothing to the case. In 3 Lansing the court say: "The writ lies in such cases for the purpose of ascertaining whether the inferior tribunal has kept within the power conferred upon it."

The case of Ackerman vs Taylor, 8 N. J. L., 376 (3 Halstead), draws the distinction between the power to review on the merits and for excess of jurisdiction, and goes to maintain the case of the respondent. The case was upon a statute providing that no certiorari shall be issued to remove proceedings had in pursuance of the act. But the court say, "Suppose the proceedings are had, not in pursuance, but under pretence of the statute? Can it be supposed that the legislature intended in such a case to deny the use of the writ?" They were of the opinion that, notwithstanding the statute, legal subjects of inquiry might be presented for their consideration on certiorari, but say, "although we do not examine the merits of their decisions from which we are restrained by the just effect of the final and conclusive quality attached to them, we nevertheless inquire whether they have exercised or exceeded the jurisdiction given to them, whether they have pursued the powers granted in their creation or assumed others never confided to them. The superintending power of this court, and the use of the writ of certiorari, are no doubt within the scope of legislative action, may be restrained, abridged, perhaps abolished. Yielding on one hand to the will of the legislature, we are on the other to deny the writ to a citizen in no case where he may lawfully claim it."

Murphree vs. Leeper, 1 Overton, Tenn., 1791, has nothing more than what is to be found in that part of the opinion of ex parte mayor of Albany, already cited.

A case from the reports of Tennessee, much more in point, is Wade vs. Murry, 2 Sneed, 50, 1854. This was a proceeding to contest the election of Murry to the office of attorney-general for the fourth judicial circuit of Tennessee. The legislature had provided a special tribunal for the trial of contested elections, before which a contest for the office of attorney-general was had, and the election declared void. Murry then applied for a certiorari to review the decision. Under the act of the legislature as construed by the court, the decision was final and conclusive. The election had been declared void because "the sheriff of Smith county had failed to open and hold an election in the ninth civil district of said county, and the sheriff in Dekalb had in like manner failed to open and hold an election in the thirteenth civil district of the last named county;" so that the facts being admitted, the decision of the inferior tribunal, alleged to be erroneous, was upon a question of law. The case presented to the court, therefore, was precisely the case now before this court. The court held that the writ would not lie and say: "It is true that this tribunal, created by the act of 1854, is an inferior jurisdiction in the meaning of our constitution and laws; and it is equally true that the certiorari is the appropriate method by which the circuit court, as a court of general jurisdiction, exercises control over all inferior tribunals. But it would be contradictory to hold that a writ of error proper would not lie, and yet the certiorari as a substitute for the writ of error, might be maintained, and it would be no less contradictory or absurd to hold that a decision intended to be final and conclusive could be reviewed in any mode whatever." See also ex parte Childs, 12 S. C., 111.

The writ of certiorari has no peculiar virtue that exempts or tends to exempt it from statutory control. It was the nature of its office, not an inherent power in the writ itself, that created the apparent exception. When the operation of the writ was extended to an examination into errors of law, it fell at once within the operation of statutes making the decision of the inferior tribunal final and conclusive. It is because the common council is an inferior tribunal, exercising judicial powers, whose procedure is not according to the course of common law, that the right to review its determination is claimed. Concede this, and also that the appellant has no other remedy. This gives to the application for the writ all the strength that it is possible to give it. But the decision of the council, as we have seen, is final and conclusive by the statute. Under such circumstances the court are unanimously of the opinion that the law is settled, beyond doubt or controversy against the power of the circuit court to issue the writ in a case like that for which it is demanded.

Counsel for the appellant in their brief say, "Suppose that the council had found from the evidence before it and entered of record that the plaintiff had received 2000 votes and that the defendant had received 1500 votes, and then the council should upon this finding determine and decide that defendant was duly elected and award him the office. Will counsel for respondent assert that this could not be corrected on review? Would the courts be powerless to set aside this glaring abuse of authority?" Probably not; because in the case supposed there would be an abuse of authority, not an erroneous exercise of it—an excess, not an erroneous exercise of power.

The case before us is different. The decision complained of was one which the council had a strict, legal right to make. Their decision at the most is but erroneous on the merits not void, a question of which the council, not ourselves, are the final judges.

That section 9 of article VI of the constitution of the state denies power to the legislature to make the decision of the council final and conclusive is a position taken by counsel for the appellant, but which is not supported by any authority cited or which it is believed possible to cite. A statutory right may be restricted to a statutory remedy. The legislature may abolish the office of mayor any time it sees fit. And, too, if such a construction could be put on the constitution it would leave the remedy by quo warranto open to the appellant, which must have the effect to defeat this proceeding.

The case has been erroneously entitled by counsel as against D. P. Thompson, instead, as it should have been, against the common council of the city of Portland.—W. & N. Railroad Co vs. Railroad Com., 113 Mass., 563; Crawford vs. Township Board, 22 Mich., 405.

The judgment of the circuit court should be affirmed, and it is so ordered.

At the present time about two thousand watches are made in this country every working day. About one-half of these are produced in the great factory at Waltham, Massachusetts, while the remainder are divided between six other factories in different parts of the country.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

MONDAY, Dec. 5.

Opinions differ as to the condition of the wheat market. One firm to-day gave $1 60@1 61 per cental as a quotation for wheat on the dock. Another gave $1 57½@1 58⅓ the basis of the market; and still another $1 51½. The second figure is probably about correct. No business of consequence has been done for several days. The feeling has been better during the past two or three days; but as telegraphic communication was interrupted yesterday, nothing was learned of the situation in England. Freights are unchanged.

There are no changes in the home produce market.

Dr. Stinson's Asthma Remedy is unequaled as a positive Alterative and Cure for Asthma and Dyspepsia, and all their attendant evils. It does not merely afford temporary relief, but is a permanent cure. Mrs. B. F. Lee, of Belmore, O., says of it: "I am surprised at the speedy effects of your remedy. It is the first medicine in six years that has loosened my cough and made expectoration easy. I now sleep all night without coughing." If your druggist does not keep it, send for treatise and testimonials to
